

The different parts of the UK

Firstly, there is a difference between the UK and Great Britain.
Does anyone know what the difference is?

The UK: England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland

Great Britain: England, Wales and Scotland

There are many different regions and cultures within the UK.

There is also a huge difference in accents across the country.

For example, people in the South are viewed as being much more serious and cold, whereas people in the North of England are often seen as friendlier and it is much cheaper to live in the North.

My favourite part of the UK (excluding London) is Wales because it is really beautiful and the people are very kind.

My mother is from a small town in the Wales, near to the mountains and so we often visit Wales as a family.

Are there many different cultures within Spain?

What is your favourite part of Spain (excluding Sevilla)?

England

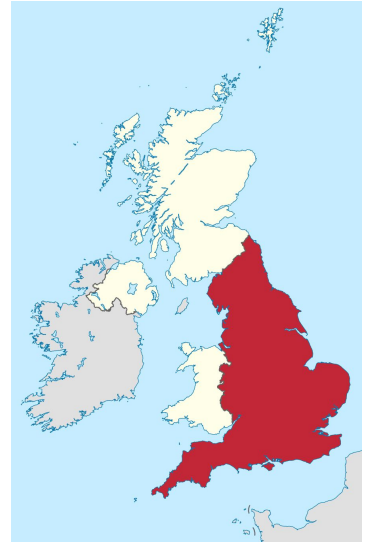

England is probably the place that you think of when you imagine the UK.

It has the biggest population and the capital is London.

It has the best weather in the UK.

Has anyone here visited England?

Where? Did you like it? Would you go back in the future?

Wales

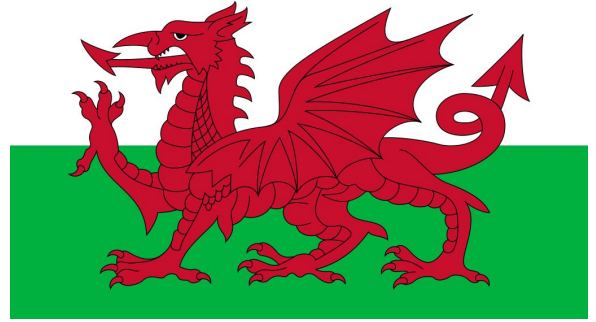

I think this is the most beautiful part, with the friendliest people.

It has a large mountain range and lots of people climb Mount Snowdon.

There are also traditional welsh cakes which are tasty.

This is the flag, with a red dragon.

Do you like the flag?

Scotland

I have only visited Scotland once. I went to Glasgow.

They have a famous traditional dance which is always done at weddings. Ceilidh (kay-lee) dancing.

The traditional dish is Haggis.

Has anyone here been to Scotland?

Northern Ireland

The capital is Belfast

- The flag is white with a red cross
- Languages: Irish and English
- Traditional food: Irish Breakfast

I have never visited Northern Ireland, I have only been to Southern Ireland.

Has anyone here ever visited any part of Ireland before?

Where? What did you think?

Thoughts...

Where would you like to go if you had to choose one out of the four places mentioned?

Can you hear the different accents?

Do you think in different parts of Spain people act differently?
